

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An accounting apparatus including a processor that performs a color correction process and a printing process, a judgment unit that makes a judgment as to whether print data instructed
5 to be printed has already been printed or not, and an accounting unit that accounts for the color correction process of the print data based on a result of the judgment. Preferably, the color correction accounting process accounts for the color correction process, and the print accounting process accounts for a print
10 process of the print data subjected to the color correction process.